Such information is collected indirectly by the applicable Regulators under the authority granted to it in securities legislation for the purposes of the administration and enforcement of the securities legislation. Schedule B

Potential Conflict of Interest Matters and Fair Allocation of Investments

The Advisor performs investment advisory services for various accounts other than the Accounts. The services of the Advisor are not exclusive, and, subject to the following, nothing in this Agreement shall prevent the Advisor or any affiliate of the Advisor, from providing similar services to other clients (whether or not their investment objectives and policies are similar to those of the Accounts) or from engaging in other activities. The Advisor may give advice and take action concerning its other clients, which may be the same as, similar to or different from the advice given, or the timing and nature of action taken, concerning the Accounts. The Advisor shall not be obligated to purchase or sell for the Accounts any security or other property which the Advisor purchases or sells for any other account if, in the sole discretion of the Advisor, such transaction appears unsuitable, impractical or for any reason undesirable for the Accounts.

Related and Connected Issuers

“Related” may be said to involve positions permitting, through ownership or otherwise, a controlling influence, and would include all companies under a common controlling influence. “Connected” may be said to involve a state of indebtedness to, or other relationship with, the registrant or those “related” to the registrant that, in connection with a distribution of securities, would be material to a purchaser of the securities. Currently, Nest Wealth has no related or connected issuers. In the event that relationships with “related” or “connected” issuers are established in the future, Nest Wealth will maintain a list of such issuers and will make such list available to its clients by posting the list on Nest Wealth’s website and keeping it updated. If a specific conflict with a “related” or “connected” issuer arises, Nest Wealth will provide affected clients with disclosure about the specific conflict with that issuer.

Allocation of Investment Opportunities

In some cases, where it is practical and possible, orders for portfolios of the same security are grouped and entered as a block order. Each account receives its pro rata share and the same blended price of each fill wherever practicable. Partial fills are allocated equitably on a pro-rata basis across all accounts for the asset class except on the rare occasion that minimum transaction charges will make this uneconomic for the client (i.e. transaction expenses are too high compared with the value of the transaction). Brokers are asked to hold uneconomic partial fills until such time as the transaction becomes large enough to be allocated fairly amongst all relevant accounts in a cost effective manner. Each account receives its pro rata amount, rounded to a board lot. This process is repeated until the entire position is purchased. If the broker is not able to hold the partial fill until it is economic for all accounts, then fills are allocated to those accounts for which it is economic. This applies equally to orders for initial public offerings that are only partially filled.

Schedule C

USE OF CLIENT BROKERAGE COMMISSIONS DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND BENCHMARK INFORMATION

Best Execution

Trade allocations to brokers will be decided on a case by case basis by the Advisor and reviewed annually to ensure appropriateness.

The price and commissions charged by a broker is not the only fact the Advisor will consider in selecting which broker it will use. In selecting a broker, the Advisor considers various factors in the context of any particular trade, including (i) price, (ii) size and type of transaction, (iii) commission, (iv) speed of execution, (v) certainty of execution, (vi) market, (vii) liquidity, (viii) reliability and trading relationship with the dealer and/or (ix) the Client's requirements or portfolio objectives.

The Advisor does not consider the provision of additional brokerage and research products and services, otherwise known as soft dollar arrangements. The Advisor will make reasonable efforts to use facilities providing information regarding orders and trades (such as the information displayed by the information processor or an information vendor).

Benchmark Information

When evaluating the performance of any investment, it may be useful to compare the performance against an appropriate benchmark in order to make an informed assessment of the Account's performance based on its investment strategy.

Generally, broad market and market-segment stock and bond indexes, such as the S&P/TSX Composite index, S&P 500 index, FTSE TMX Canada Universe Bond Index are used for this purpose as they are some of the most well-known indices. It is important to note that benchmarks do not include operating charges and transaction charges nor expenses related to the Account's investments which may affect its performance.

The past performance of any benchmark, market index, ETF, or other Security does not indicate its future performance, and future transactions will be made in different securities and different economic environments.

The Advisors rely on their own internal metrics for performance determination but may use benchmarks for comparative purposes.

Schedule F

INVESTMENT RISK DISCLOSURE

The following is a summary of the risks of investing. Please note that this list is not exhaustive, and has been provided as an indication of the factors that can affect the value of your investments.

Equity Risk: Investors in equity securities may be exposed to a high level of risk because the prices of equity securities can rise and fall significantly in a short period of time. This could arise due to the fortunes of the companies that issue them or with general stock market or economic conditions.

Short Selling Risk: Short selling strategies (shorting) can provide an investor with an opportunity to manage volatility and enhance performance in declining or volatile markets. Short selling securities involves risk because there is no assurance that securities will decline sufficiently in value during the period of the short sale to offset the borrowing costs associated with shorting to make a profit for the investor. The investor may also experience difficulties repurchasing and returning the borrowed securities. Investors may experience significant loss if the value of the shorted securities increases as there is no upper limit to what the value of a security can be and the investor is under an existing obligation to repurchase it.

Credit Risk: A fixed income security, like a bond, is essentially a promise to pay interest and repay a specified amount at a later time. The probability that the issuer of the fixed income security will fail to honour that promise is called credit risk. Credit rating agencies give investors an idea of how much of a credit risk an issuer represents. If a company or government has a high credit rating, the credit risk tends to be low. A lower credit rating means more credit risk.

Interest Rate Risk: A change in general interest rates is one of the biggest factors affecting fixed-income securities. A bond for example, pays interest based on the level of interest rates prevailing when the bond is issued. Generally, if interest rates fall, the values of the bond rises. Conversely, if interest rates go up, the value of a bond will decrease.

Inflation Risk: Inflation Risk is the risk of decline in the purchasing power of the client's savings due to a general rise in prices.

Foreign Currency Risk: Investing in securities that are priced in foreign currencies involves foreign currency risk. Securities that are priced in foreign currencies can lose value when the Canadian dollar rises against the foreign currency. As well, foreign governments and domestic may impose currency exchange restrictions, which could limit the ability to buy and sell certain foreign investments and could reduce the value of the foreign securities that are held by investors.

Foreign Market Risk: Foreign investments involve additional risks because financial markets outside of Canada and the U.S. may be less liquid and companies may be less regulated and have lower standards of accounting and financial reporting. In some countries, an established stock market and legal system that adequately protects the rights of investors may be lacking. Foreign investments can also be affected by social, political, or economic instability. Foreign governments may impose investment restrictions.

Liquidity Risk: Liquidity refers to the speed and ease with which an asset can be sold and converted into cash. Most securities can be sold easily and at a fair price. In highly volatile markets, certain securities may become less liquid, which means they cannot be sold as quickly or easily. Some securities may be illiquid because of legal restrictions, the nature of the investment, or certain other features such as guarantees or a lack of buyers interested in the particular security or market. Difficulty in selling securities may result in a loss or reduced return.

Borrowing Risk: The use of leverage may not be suitable for all investors. Using borrowed money to finance the purchase of securities involves greater risk than using cash resources only. If an investor borrows money to purchase securities, the investor's responsibility to repay the loan and pay interest as required by the terms of the loan remains the same even if the value of the securities purchased declines.

Derivatives Risk: A derivative is a type of investment whose value is derived from the performance of other investments or from the movement of interest rates, exchange rates or market indices. The Advisor will only recommend derivatives as permitted by securities regulations. The advisor may use derivatives to achieve a specific position. This is referred to as speculating. The risks are similar to equity risk and short selling risk. The Advisor may recommend derivatives to help offset losses that other investments held by a portfolio might suffer because of changes in stock prices, commodity prices or interest or exchange rates. This is referred to as hedging.

Some common risks of hedging with or investing in derivatives are:

- there is no guarantee that the derivative will be bought or sold at the right time to make a profit or limit a loss, nor that the other party to the contract will meet its obligations. Additionally, if the other party goes bankrupt, the investor could lose any deposits made or assets pledged in favour of the other party under the contract;
- there is no guarantee that a hedging strategy will always work, as the elements that determine the value of a derivative may change in a manner that is contrary to the intent of the hedge;
- hedging will not always offset a drop in the value of a security and hedging can prevent the portfolio from making a gain it otherwise may have made; and
- the portfolio may not be able to create an effective hedge against an expected change in a market if most other people expect the same change.

Exchange Traded Fund Risk: Exchange-traded funds (“ETFs”) are securities that closely resemble index funds, but can be bought and sold like common stocks:

- an ETF may fail to accurately track the market segment or index that underlies its investment objective;
- an ETF may not be “actively” managed. Such ETFs would not necessarily sell a security because the security’s issuer was in financial trouble, unless the security is removed from the applicable index being replicated. As a result, the performance of an ETF may be lower than the performance of an actively managed fund;
- some ETFs employ leverage, which can magnify the risk of the underlying market segment or index;
- the market price of an ETF units may trade at a discount or premium to its net asset value;
- an active trading market for an ETF’s units may not develop or be maintained; and
- there is no assurance that the requirements of the exchange necessary to maintain the listing of an ETF will continue to be met or remain unchanged.
